

Worldwide, more than 200 million women want to prevent or delay pregnancy but do not have access to contraceptives.

What if you could help them access the quality reproductive health products they need?

In a way that saves time and provides value for money?

AccessRH: UNFPA's procurement and information service for reproductive health supplies

Providing contraceptives for millions of people is not exactly easy.

AccessRH enables governments and NGOs to make the best use of limited resources by delivering quality supplies in a cost effective, reliable way.

Through AccessRH, governments and NGOs can partner with UNFPA to utilize the unique procurement expertise provided by the leading UN agency for reproductive health (RH).

Save time: UNFPA conducts competitive, transparent bidding, creating long term supplier agreements for a wide variety of RH items.

Ensure quality: All products undergo stringent UNFPA/WHO quality assurance processes.

Gain value for money: The significant volume of contraceptives and related items procured by UNFPA allows for competitive pricing. UNFPA passes these savings on to partners via AccessRH.

UNFPA procures RH supplies for governments and NGOs in over 140 countries every day.

Wherever you are, you can increase access to reproductive health supplies through AccessRH.

Find out how at MyAccessRH.org

Access hundreds of reproductive health products and pricing information through the AccessRH online catalog:

Medical equipment

Pharmaceuticals

Contraceptives

Reproductive health kits

Fistula repair kits

Midwifery kits

MyAccessRH.org offers a range of procurement information and tools, including the RHInterchange database where you can find contraceptive order information for more than 140 countries.